THE DAY IN HISTORY

Memorial Day originated from a custom observed by the ladies of the South during the Civil War. In early spring they visited the graves of those who had died in battle, or from illness contracted in the field, and decorated them with flowers. Thus, by imperceptible degrees, they established what had become a general custom at the close of the war. At the North, while similar services had been inaugurated, no especial unanimity was developed until its formal establishment by the Grand Army of the Republic in an order issued May 5, 1868, by its commander-in-chief, Gen. John A. Logan, who named May 30 as the day for its observance in all parts of the United States. The United States Government has never declared it a legal holiday, but both houses, when in session, adjourn as a mark of respect to the memory of the illustrious dead. The first legislative action for the observance of May 30 was by the State of New Jersey, and the first State to declare the day a legal holiday was New York.

FOREMAN MILLER RETIRED

After 34 Years' Service for the P. R. R. Company.

On Tuesday, June 1, Andrew Jackson Miller, one of the oldest and most trustworthy track foremen on the Bedford Division, will retire from the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, after being employed 34 years.

Mr. Miller was born on a farm on the Ringold Manor, Washington County, Md., near dam No. 4 on the Potomac, October 30, 1843. Two years later his father purchased a farm and mill property two miles north of Williamsport, Md. He attended subscription and county schools until he arrived at the age of 12 years and then entered his father's mill as an apprentice. Some years later, during the war, and on account of business being very uncertain, his father disposed of his property, when Mr. Miller made up his mind to go out and paddle his own canoe.

On February 14, 1865, he married Miss Margaret N. Ripple of near Williamsport, Md., and set sail for Bedford County, landing in B. R. Ashcom's mill; two years later took charge of the Tunnel mill on Brush Creek and one year after had possession of the Hartley mill, near Luterville. In 1871 the mill was purchased by the Kimmel Coal and Iron Company, which company soon discovered that the property was not what they wanted and allowed the mill to go to ruin. About this time Mr. Miller had quite a sum of money which he lost by the breaking up of a bank. This somewhat discouraged him with the milling business and during the winter of 1872-3 he went to work for Drolling and Wertz who had the contract of grading for sidings at Mt. Dallas.

Following is the itinerary for the coming week:

Monday—Saxton, Everett, Loysburg.
Tuesday—Bedford, Hopewell, Mann's Choice, St. Clairsville.
Wednesday—Wolfsburg, Rainsburg, Schellsburg.
Thursday—Alum Bank, Buffalo Mills, Fishertown.
Friday—Clearville, New Paris, Cessna, Hyndman.

The speakers are Rev. William H. Chase, Assistant State Superintendent; Dr. L. L. Sieber and Rev. Alford Kelley, Field Superintendents.

Road May Be Completed

The State Railroad Commission of Pennsylvania will take up the question propounded in petitions recently sent it and which were signed by business men of Blair and Bedford Counties, praying the commission to complete the proposed railroad which would connect Hollidaysburg and Bedford. An agreement is alleged to have been entered into several years ago by the company in which it is said to have promised to complete the road. Last Saturday W. H. Herr of Altoona, one of the petitioners, received the following communication from Harrisburg:

Estate of George W. Dauler, Jr., late of Bedford Township; bond of George Walter Dauler, executor, in the sum of $60,000 filed and approved.

Estate of Emma C. Wise, late of Broad Top, petition of J. L. Tenley, administrator, for order of sale granted. Same estate, bond of administrator in the sum of $2,000 filed and approved.

Estate of John Manspeaker, late of East Providence, petition to stay all proceedings; rule granted.

Estate of Fannie Urban, the mother, and be discharged as guardian; granted as prayed for.

Estate of John S. Guyer, Ex-County Treasurer, Joseph P. Imler and H. W. Cogan, Ex-County Sheriffs, from report of County Auditors; issue awarded in which the county is made defendant.

An Appeal to Citizens

To the Citizens of Bedford:

The committee of the local G. A. R. Post, having in charge the arrangements for the Memorial Day exercises at the Court House next Monday morning at 10 o'clock, beg to say to you that, owing to the advancing years and infirmities of the surviving veterans, they will be unable to go to you for your contributions of flowers this year. Our youngest comrade, Dr. S. F. Statler, to whose indefatigable efforts the gathering of a large part of the supply of flowers has already been due, will be engaged with his duties as Captain of the railroad company. We will trust to your generosity and kindly feelings for the departed whose graves we want to decorate, and take this method of calling your attention to the day, and asking you to bring your floral offerings to the Court House.

A. L. Lyon,

Chairman of the Committee.

MEMORIAL DAY

Why We Celebrate It—A Tender Memory.

On Decoration Day we place flowers and the national colors on the graves of those who fought for the preservation of the Union and the rights and liberties of man guaranteed by our American free institutions. Throughout our country the lives and the deeds of those who perished in the Civil War will be recalled in tender memory. If the day shall accomplish its purpose, it will give us, as a nation, more grateful recognition of the value of institutions handed down to us by the generations gone before, seen once more, in memory, through the smoke and the bloody vapors of death-stricken battle-fields, as the citadel of liberties for whose integrity human life was irretrievably sacrificed.

It rests with us, as the possessors of such a heritage, to demonstrate our worthiness of the sacrifices and of the trust entailed. There is no question as to the seriousness of the problems that confront this generation of the latter days in proving itself a worthy guardian of free institutions and of equal justice as between man and man. There is every probability that civil war has been put permanently behind us, whatever may happen; but the fight that must be maintained to secure to ourselves and our children the benefits of those essential rights of life, liberty and happiness, for which our forbears struggled, is no less strenuous, however less bloody.

It will be a fortunate thing for the country if public speakers of this Memorial Day shall unite to summon public sentiment to the aggressive support of public-spirited citizens in every city and hamlet, who are fighting the poor man's fight for the "square deal." At no anniversary of this nature in the past has there been such occasion for a rallying of all the honesty and integrity of a nation to the task of purging some of its institutions from abuses such as astound and disgrace us as a people. That, in the name of the people, there should have been created agencies of such immense power willing to abuse the confidence reposed in them startles us; and therein lies the hopefulness for better conditions that is certainly widespread and positive.

ALL TIRED OUT

Hundreds More in Bedford in the Same Pliight.

Tired all the time;
Weary and worn out night and day;

Back aches; side aches,
All on account of the kidneys.

Must help them at their work.

A Bedford citizen shows you how: Mrs. Margaret Brightbill, W. Pitt St., Bedford, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism and various symptoms of kidney complaint for years, at times being so lame and stiff that I could scarcely get about the house. My kidneys were very weak, the secretions being unnatural and I felt tired and languid all the time. Finally when Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, I procured a box at Dull's Drug Store and they gave me such great relief that I continued their use. I can say that my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills has been satisfactory in every way."

THE HORIZON AND THE WOOD

There, through the closing gate of Day,
The sunset seems to drift away
In pallid gold and dream like red,
With thin gray cloud-lines overhead.

At the dim margin of the blue
Venus is trembling into view,
Pulsing with timid, silvery light—
The first gem on the breast of Night.

Here, in the wood, all birds are still,
Save the sad-hearted whippoorwill,
Invoking through insistent song
Reluctant vengeance for some wrong.

Above the fire-fly's fitful spark
An owl sits brooding in the dark
Silent, beneath his feathered hood—
A sombre wizard of the wood.

—William H. Hayne, in the June Scribner.

GROW TOO OLD FOR PARADE

As a day celebrated only by veterans of the Union army, Memorial Day is rapidly slipping into the past. The veterans are growing too old for the parades which, until within a few years, were its most conspicuous feature. In the south, where Decoration Day was formerly observed on different dates in different states, the custom has grown of celebrating May 30, which until recently was an exclusive anniversary of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Use Pure Copper Sulphate

As the time of the year is here when much sulphate of copper, or blue vitriol, will be used in making the Bordeaux mixture for spraying fruit trees, potatoes, etc., State Zoologist Surface calls attention to the necessity of obtaining the purest sulphate of copper in the market, in order to secure the best results.

One of the most difficult and expensive problems in the manufacture of copper sulphate is to eliminate the sulphate of iron. A considerable percentage of iron sulphate may be mixed with copper sulphate without its presence being detected. There are qualities of copper sulphate on the market containing a large percentage of iron sulphate, so as to render the article almost worthless for spraying purposes. A good copper sulphate should present perfectly clean, sharp crystals. Growing trees and plants are poor things to run any risk with, and, hence, those persons who are caring for them by spraying should use the best materials, clean bluestone and pure lime. Buy of reliable dealers is the advice on the subject given by the Division of Economic Zoology of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Last year sulphate of copper sold at an unusually low price, owing to depression in the copper market and general dullness in business. While conditions have been better this spring, there has been no material advance in the price of the sulphate. It will be observed that this material is spoken of in this article as sulphate of copper, copper sulphate, blue vitriol and bluestone. It is known by each of these names.

MEMORIAL

The Northern Blue—The Southern Gray.

By DAMON HARVEY
Wherever comrades may repose, free from the bugle's call,
As heroes they in mem'ry live, torn, scar'd by steel and ball;
There let us meet and mingle tears in unison today,
And scatter floral wreaths, alike, up on the blue and gray.

The few remaining "Vets," with pride and trembling, tottering tread

All join to decorate the graves of our heroic dead.

—breach of peace that once prevailed, from age has died away, The tears of love are shed the same upon the blue and gray.

With din of battle on their ear, the scenes of war in mind,
Our brave defenders, aged, gray, are dropping out of line.
E're long the "taps" will call the last true Soldier Boy away,
Who may have worn the Northern blue—perhaps the Southern gray.

No slab of granite marks the spot where many warriors rest;
No loving hands with garlands fair to lay upon their breast;
But yet the stars that guard each mound of consecrated clay,
Smile down with equal rays of love on both the blue and gray.

They laid their guns and swords aside with many a manly shout;
From earthly service, one by one, were gently mustered out.

And as the flowers of May adorn their silent graves today,
Our Nation clasps the hands of peace o'er both the blue and gray.

N. B.—If the reader of the above poem will send five 2-cent stamps to the author, Damon Harvey, Clearfield, Pa., who is a helpless invalid, he will greatly appreciate the favor and will send in return, his photo and the poem, nicely printed on plate paper, suitable for scrap-book or framing.

DRAW PEOPLE CLOSER TOGETHER

The youngest drummer boy who took part in the great war is now past middle life. The youngest soldiers who bore arms in it are entering upon old age. If the celebrations of today lack the military spirit of former years, the mellowing memories of the past which it brings up only draw the American people closer together.

A MOST VALUABLE AGENT.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiflament. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry Bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchitis, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherry Bark in promoting digestion and building up the strength of the system, and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe obstinate, hangnail, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hangnail coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from the lungs, that it has performed its most wonderful cures.

Prof. Elmer Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine:

"Indispensable serves an excellent purpose."

Holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution, it is one of the best medicinal products of the present time in its action upon the body, especially the stomach, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach). It is a most efficient preparation.

Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (burn) and excessive gastric (stomach) acidity."

"Golden Medical Discovery" enriches and purifies the blood curing blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings and old sores.

Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet telling all about the native medicinal roots composing this wonderful medicine. There is no alcohol in it.

Origin of the "Johnnies"

The opposing armies applied many different names to each other during the war. At the outset "Reb" and "Secesh" were favorite terms as applied to the Confederates. Along in 1862 "Grayback" and "Butternut" were often used, both derived from the uniforms the Confederates wore.

Many of their uniforms were of a butternut color, dyed reddish brown with butternut bark. But some time in 1864, as the story goes, two pickets, one from each army, were taunting each other. The Union man said it was as bad to be a rebel as to be a Johnny Bull. The name "Johnnies," because of England's supposed friendship for the Confederacy, sprung into great popularity and has survived.

Liberty Township in its alphabetical order, as printed the burial places are given as being in King Township. Five burial places named, beginning with Brumbaugh Graveyard, are in Liberty Township.

In the growing of potatoes on a small scale, in the garden or in the "early patch" for summer use, fairly satisfactory results can be obtained by mulching. The method, however, is practicable only when the mulching material is cheap. Old hay or straw can be used, and should be spread about four inches deep just before the plants appear, and after the ground has been harrowed once or twice after planting. To grow in this manner rather large seed pieces should be planted two or three inches deep, while the hills can be placed either 18x18 or 12x24 inches. This is the advice given by the Division of Zoology at Harrisburg.

TRY THE MONEY-BACK CURE FOR INDIGESTION.

Nine times in ten stomach derangements are responsible for sallow complexion, dull eyes and thin body.

It is the stomach that supplies nourishing blood to the muscles, the nerves, and skin. If the stomach is healthy, plenty of nutritious matter will be absorbed by the blood. If it is not healthy, the food will ferment, and undigested, will pass along through the bowels, furnishing so little nutritious matter that the blood becomes impoverished, and the glow of health vanishes.

If you suffer from nervousness, sick headache, belching of gas, sour taste in the mouth, heaviness after eating, or any other miserable stomach disturbance, you need Mi-o-na, and the sooner you get it the quicker you will be healthier and happier.

It will relieve any distressed stomach condition almost immediately. It will cure any disease according to directions. F. W. Jordan sells it for 50 cents a large box, and he thinks enough of it to guarantee it to cure all ills.

AFTER MANY YEARS

By Paul Pinkerton
On the Common stand the cannon, Sullen, black and grim,
With their shiny muzzles frowning Over flower-beds trim.

In the dashing, splashing fountain Robins bathe and play; Green the grass grows round about them,
Moistened with the spray.

Cool and silent rest the cannon, Gone their guards of old, Glossy vines enfold each carriage With caressing hold.

O'er the lawn run laughing children, Eager for a ride; Scrambling, climbing up the cannon, Perching there astride.

Mounted on their stalwart horses, Merrily they play; Peaceful years lie fair between them And the battle day.

Origin of the "Johnnies"

The opposing armies applied many different names to each other during the war. At the outset "Reb" and "Secesh" were favorite terms as applied to the Confederates. Along in 1862 "Grayback" and "Butternut" were often used, both derived from the uniforms the Confederates wore.

Many of their uniforms were of a butternut color, dyed reddish brown with butternut bark. But some time in 1864, as the story goes, two pickets, one from each army, were taunting each other. The Union man said it was as bad to be a rebel as to be a Johnny Bull. The name "Johnnies," because of England's supposed friendship for the Confederacy, sprung into great popularity and has survived.

THE HEART'S FAR CALL

By ELVIRA MENDHAM.

(Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

The road stretched white and endless over the hills and far away. The siren of an automobile came clearly, penetratingly, across the fields and hills, and soon the machine itself dashed across the restful landscape.

"Do drive slower, dear. I'm so afraid we'll run away from all this and never be able to find it again." The girl looked out over the landscape in rapture.

The man, with his hands on the wheel of the automobile, laughed gladly as he slowed up.

"I'm so glad you like it, dear. Of course it is all new to you. If you will only learn to love it as I do! Eight miles more and we're at the ranch, sweetheart. Tell me, are you sure, perfectly sure, that you will never regret coming so far away—that you won't wish you hadn't married me?" And for one little moment a look of doubt and fear crossed his fine, weather-browned face.

Dave Clark had been born and bred in the western Dakota hills on his father's ranch until he reached the age when his education demanded his going east to enter the big eastern technical college.

He returned fitted by training for a civil engineer, but by nature and desire for the life on the ranch that his father had loved before him. He went along contentedly and successfully and had reached the age of thirty when it occurred to him with overwhelming conviction that there was something or monotony as he was living. "If I were only married," he said to himself, but his heart had refused to respond to any of the wiles of the nearby maidens. He wondered in a mild way just why he had never thought of it before and that night took a train for the east.

"Dave, you old miser, why didn't you come before?" cried Bob Merrill as he all but wrung Dave's hand off when the latter walked into his office. "Well, I can't figure out myself why I didn't," laughed Dave.

That night Dave sat next to Bob's sister at dinner. She wore a blue gown that matched her eyes, and Dave felt sensations that he had never experienced on the ranch.

"I just can't believe you're Dave Clark," she said banteringly, her eyes merry and sweet. "I just know you by heart—how you won the last football game you played at college by the most record breaking run and how nobody could find you after to congratulate you—oh, I've just known you for ages."

"OH, WHY DIDN'T YOU COME, DEAR?" SHE SOURED.

That evening was the happiest Dave had ever known, and he felt as if he had known Bob's sister all his life.

Soon after that he made a second visit to the city. And this second time when he returned to the ranch it was

A Cough Medicine

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a regular cough medicine, a strong medicine, a doctor's medicine. Good for easy coughs, hard coughs, desperate coughs. If your doctor endorses it for your case, take it. If not, don't take it. Never go contrary to his advice.

We publish our formulas. We banish alcohol from our medicines.

Ayers We urge you to consult your doctor.

The dose of Ayer's Pills is small, only one at bedtime. As a rule, laxative doses are better than cathartic doses. For constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick-headaches, they cannot be excelled. Ask your doctor about this.

with a wild happiness surging in his heart that turned earth into paradise, for Bob's sister came with him as his wife.

Rosemary was delighted and bewildered with the novelty of the hills and far stretching ranches and the great roving herds of cattle and the absolutely different routine of life. For the first six months Dave tasted the cup of happiness to the full.

Then a little discontented look grew in Rosemary's eyes and dimmed their happiness.

Born and bred in the city, to the city's tastes and ways, the life on the western ranch came to Rosemary a wearisome ordeal. Dave's eyes caught the shadow in his wife's, and, though no word was spoken, each was aware of the cloud.

"Suppose we take a little trip, Rosemary," Dave suggested one evening when they had been married scarcely a year. Rosemary threw down the pen she was writing with, and her face lit up. "Back home?" she suggested tremulously. "Back home," replied Dave, and a sore hurt came into his heart at his young wife's gladness.

"I'll have to go back tomorrow," he announced one evening when he had been in the city about three weeks. His heart contracted with a hot anguish at the look of absolute despair that came into his wife's face.

"I think I'll leave Rosemary with you for awhile," he continued, with a forced smile. "You see, the ranch is pretty dull as a steady diet, and Rosemary might just as well stay on a little longer."

A look of glad relief came into Rosemary's eyes, to be chased away by one of uncertainty and something akin to fear.

Dave bade his wife goodby cheerfully and took the train with a pain at his heart that almost stifled him. The emptiness of every room, of every nook and corner, at home made him like one demented in his first grief. He fought it all out at last, and under the stars he faced the heart tragedy of his life.

Her letters came regularly, chatty and full of her life, and he answered as regularly, with no hint of his real feelings.

At the end of the year came a great decision. He would sell the ranch. The little note of pathos in her letters toward the end of their year apart touched him and caused a new hope in his heart.

"I'd never ask her to come back here," he told himself. In every letter she was asking why he did not come. Couldn't he get away? Had he forgotten her? She was tired of waiting?

"Yes, I must go to her," he acknowledged to himself one cool autumn night as he sat before the fire.

Outside the leaves were fast falling in the dusk, and the bareness of late fall threw a somber sadness over the plains and hills.

"Another year would kill me," he said wearily, looking around the room. "God, how I have missed her—my little wife!" He threw out his arms in longing. She had always run to him in those first days and climbed up on his knees, cuddling her brown head into his neck.

Then came the old rancorous taunt—she hadn't loved him; she had wearied in the first year of their paradise. No; after all, he couldn't go to her, for she did not need him, and his head sank with almost a cry on his breast.

The gust of wind that swept through the room did not disturb his grief. It was a glad, inarticulate little sob of fear and longing that made him start and cause his head to reel as he saw a dainty, wind-tossed little figure holding open the door.

Just one little second, and then, before he could rise, she threw herself wildly, passionately into his arms, clutching her brown head into his neck, kissing and caressing him in a very delirium of happiness.

"Oh, why didn't you come, dear—why didn't you come?" she sobbed in a paroxysm of grief. He soothed and petted and fondled her as he might an infant until her emotion had spent itself. Then when he had become master of himself they talked it all out in the big chair by the fire while night crept on over the silent, shadowy hills and the cattle lowed from afar.

Overreached Himself.

"It's funny how afraid rich men are of being cheated," reflected Mr. Bates, "especially when they get out in the country. Now, last fall one of the fur-lined overcoat kind came up here. He snipped off his words as if they'd been coupons, and though he'd come up here for rest he seemed to think somebody'd charge him extra for it if he mentioned the fact."

"Well, the Bassett place, up on Birch Hill, was for sale, and he took a fancy to it—it looked just like the house where he was born," he said.

"But don't you let it out," he says to me. "They'll be asking some fancy price for it if they know I want it."

"Well I drove him up there after he'd made up his mind, and we found Isaac Bassett out in the yard."

"I hear this place is for sale. How much?" says Mr. Millionaire.

"Isaac opened his mouth, but that was as far as he got."

"I'll give you $950 for it; not a cent more," said Mr. Millionaire slambang.

"I'll take it," says Isaac.

"I ain't mean," he says, after he'd made out a check and we'd started off, "nor elost, but I won't be done," says he, "lest because I've made my pile."

"I didn't tell him," chuckled Mr. Bates, "that he'd done himself."

"Had he?" questioned Mr. Bates' companion.

"Sure," said Mr. Bates. "The farm was put up for sale for the taxes, and all they asked was $650. And I've heard that Isaac had privately offered it for $600."—Youth's Companion.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Charles Hawtrey's Twang. "Once on a time"—it is Charles Hawtrey who tells this tale—"I tried to sink my identity in the part of a man who was my dearest friend. I had known him since he was a baby. I wanted to sink my own identity and copy him. I was not allowed to. This is how it happened:

"De Wolf Hopper had put on in London a burlesque of a play in which Mrs. Langtry and myself were acting. Some one burlesqued me, of course. He had merely a few lines to say, but he did it very well. It so happened that on the night it was produced I was not acting. So I strolled round to Hopper's theater and suggested to him that I should take the part myself that night. The resemblance to Mr. Hawtrey was certainly remarkable and would have been more so had it not been for the pronounced American accent."

"That was the first and last time I have ever been accused of a twang."—New York Tribune.

Sixteenth Century Meals.

Judging from a passage in Harrison's "Description of Britain," breakfast eating in the sixteenth century was held to denote effeminacy. "Hencefore," he writes, "there hath been more time spent in eating and drinking than commonly is in these days; for whereas of old we had breakfasts in the forenoon, beverages or nutritions, after dinner, and thereto reare suppers when it was time to go to rest, now these od repasts, thanked be God, are verie well left, and eche one (except here and there some young hungry stomach that cannot fast till dinner time) contenteth himself with dinner and supper onlie. The nobilitie, gentrie and students ordinarielie go to dinner at 11 before noon and to supper at 5 or between 5 and 6 at after noon. The merchants dine and sup seldom before 12 at noon and 6 at night, especielie in London. The husbandmen dine also at high noon and sup at 7 or 8, but out of the tearme, in our universities, the scholars dine at 10."

Saved by His Wit.

The French author Martainville was a royalist and did not hesitate to attack the French revolution and its authorities. Presently, of course, he was summoned to appear before the revolutionary tribunal, with the terrible Fouquier at its head. The revolutionary tribunals at that time did not hesitate to send everybody to the guillotine who had ventured to attack them.

Martainville expected to go with the rest of the victims. "What is your name?" asked the revolutionary judge. "Martainville," said the young author. "Martainville!" exclaimed the judge.

"You are deceiving us and trying to hide your rank. You are an aristocrat, and your name is De Martainville." "Citizen president," exclaimed the young man, "I am here to be shortened, not to be lengthened! Leave me my name!" A true Frenchman loves a witicism above all things, and the tribunal was so much pleased by Martainville's grim response that it spared his life.

Trees for Beauty and Shade

Trees are planted for beauty and shade. They give solid character and dignity to the home setting, and if rightly arranged afford a pleasing background to the home landscape picture.

Their shade and seclusion are enjoyed when located not too near the dwelling.

Make the back yard as clean and inviting as the front yard. Plant it with choice flowers, shrubs and climbing vines. Let it be the very garden of Eden, where every member of the household can breathe the rarest perfumes, feast the eyes on delicate forms and colors and enjoy completely the best that the exterior home can give.

Farmers, mechanics, railroaders, laborers rely on Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. Takes the sting out of cuts, burns or bruises at once. Pain cannot stay where it is used.

Shoes That Hurt

Women with narrow heels frequently have trouble with ready-made footwear. The shoe rides up at the heel and a painful blister occurs, which effectively cripples one for the time being. This is especially true of low shoes. To prevent it with your next pair cut a few inches from a piece of old velvet, or get a bit of velvet ribbon to fit between the heel and the shoe. It can be either tacked into place or pasted. This renders the heel comfortable without lessening the size of the shoe, which is the disadvantage of the felt sole.

At the battle of Charleston, Mo., in August, 1861, Lieutenant Colonel Ransom of the Eleventh Illinois was urging his men to the charge when an officer rode up to him and said: "What do you mean? You are killing our own men." "I know what I am doing," replied Ransom. "Whom are you for?" "I am for Jeff Davis," was the reply. "You are the man I'm after," returned Ransom, and instantly two pistols were drawn. The Confederate fired first, hitting Ransom in the arm. Ransom shot his antagonist dead.

MEMORIAL DAY

The growing interest in Memorial Day is most commendable. It should be a pleasure as it is a duty for the American people to devote one day in the year to honoring the memory of those who, in their young manhood, were willing to bare their breasts at the battle's front, whether fighting for independence or to preserve the nation from being divided and dismembered, or to repel savage bands or maintain our national honor and integrity.

The great majority of those who answered the call to arms in our last great war now rest peacefully in their last, long sleep, their warfare over, but the memory of their valorous deeds is not forgotten, nor should it be forgotten while the nation stands.

The annual Memorial Day serves the purpose of kindling anew the fires on the altar of liberty, and so long as these fires are kept burning and patriotic sentiments are instilled into the minds of the youth of the land, bright are the prospects of coming ages, while the history of the world clearly teaches that nations rapidly degenerate when patriotic fires are allowed to die down and smolder or go out.

From the time

"When Freedom from her mountain heights Unfurled her standard to the air" to the present we have done honor as a nation to those who responded in their country's hour of need, and the custom dare not be allowed to die out if we value what was achieved by their efforts. The custom of impartially distributing garlands alike on the graves of the Blue and the Gray is characteristic of American breadth of thought and is most praiseworthy, for civil strife is ended and all are parts of a re-united and mighty nation.

SHIFTING TARIFF SENTIMENT

The tariff is to some extent, but by no means wholly, a local interest, but it cannot anywhere be a local issue. In every locality some people favor protection and others favor a revenue tariff. Opinion is not unanimous, or nearly unanimous, anywhere. On account of their leading industries some localities are strongly for a high tariff and others, with different interests, desire a low tariff. To this extent locality affects interests in the tariff.

But no locality can raise duties or lower them. Exclusive power over duties lies in Congress. The tariff is a national act; it can only be determined by a national election, and therefore it is merely playing with words to describe it as a local issue.

Naturally enough the local interest in the tariff varies. John C. Calhoun of South Carolina favored protective duties at a time when Daniel Webster was making one of the best free trade speeches ever made. Later the South went in heavily for cotton growing and opposed duties designed to benefit manufacturers. New England developed manufacturing and went in for a high tariff. Manufacturing is not the result of Protection, but Protection is the result of manufacture. It isn't the infant industry that gets protection, but the adult industry that is able to exert power over Congressmen.

The protective system having been extended to raw materials, where there is no excuse for it, the manufacturers are calling for lower duties, and a Virginia Senator wants sumac protected from foreign competition, and a South Carolina Senator wants protection for cotton, and an Alabama Senator wants protection for iron ore and a Mississippi Senator wants it for lumber, and a Louisiana Senator wants it for sugar.

It is impossible to protect everybody without burdening everybody with taxes. The only way to treat these local interests is to cut out the element of Protection entirely and levy a tariff for revenue only, the only purpose for which Congress has any right to impose taxation.—Philadelphia Record.

MONSTER SNAKE KILLED

A battle royal was waged on Boher's Hill Monday afternoon when the progress of George A. Calhoun, who was leisurely strolling over the wooded knoll, commanding with nature in the deep shade, was impeded by a monster blacksnake. The venomous reptile drew itself into an hyperbolic curve and immediately showed fight. Mr. Calhoun took in the situation. Seeing that retreat was impossible he gathered together all possible primitive munitions of war, and, surrounding his antagonist, began to hurl the rugged missiles, finally lowering the proud head of the writhing, coiling snake. A post mortem examination showed numerous spots on the ebon coat, thus indicating that Mr. Calhoun's every throw was effective. A measurement revealed the fact that the snake was eleven feet two inches long. The measurement was checked and verified by Pardy Gilchrist.

LITTLE BOY LOST

Little Robert Minnick, less than three years of age, was found by the local police Tuesday afternoon, on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks back of the J. C. Blair Company's buildings. His father lives in Everett and his mother is supposed to be in Greensburg.

Mrs. Minnick with the youngster, came to Huntingdon several days ago, leaving her home and husband in Everett and it is said that she went to Greensburg. She left the little boy in the care of Mrs. Elizabeth Carmon of Seventh Street. On Tuesday afternoon, the little fellow wandered away and down Seventh Street to the railroad. He lost his way and did not know how to get back and for some little time the police were unable to find out where he belonged.

When the Mayor found out who the little fellow was, he sent orders straight to Everett for the father to come to Huntingdon and get the boy. The father said that he would be down at once and the boy will be turned over to him.—New Era, Huntingdon.

LETTER TO D. C. REILEY

Bedford, Pa.
Dear Sir: The real test of a paint is how many square feet will a gallon of it cover? And all the paints swear they cover 300 square feet two coats. Mildly, they prevaricate.

L. H. Ferchaud, builder, 1108 Dupre St., New Orleans, covered 1900 square feet with three gallons Devoe last year; and paints all his jobs Devoe. That's how the tale gets to us.

He doesn't say whether one or two coats; if one, there's nothing wonderful in it; two, they must have very small feet in New Orleans.

Devoe doesn't stop at 300 feet; but over 600'. Most paints, we suppose, can be stretched to 300 feet, but they're mighty thin; they cover well 150 to 200.

When N. R. Watkins, Lott, Texas, painted his house before, it took 13 gallons Devoe 7 gallons. That shows the strength of the paints.

W. B. McCluney painted a house in Crystal Springs, Miss., to test two pure paints; one coat 6 gallons Devoe; the other coat 10 gallons of a New Orleans paint. That shows the strength of the paints.

Surfaces differ; one takes more, another takes less. Devoe covers more than any other paint; two to one in the case of half the paints. But how many it covers, we don't know till we see the surface.

Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOE & CO.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Communication From Our Regular Correspondent

THE SENATE AND TARIFF

Hope in the House-Senate Conference—Disquieting Conditions in Cuba.

Washington, D. C., May 25, 1909.

President Taft on his recent trip into the South predicted that Congress would pass the tariff bill and adjourn by June 20. It is, of course, barely possible that the President had some inside information which led him to make that prediction and that time will prove him a true prophet, but from a careful observation of the situation in the Senate it is difficult to find warrant for such sanguine expectation. The Democrats are not delaying the final disposal of the bill. They realize, as Senator Tillman said in debate, that Senator Aldrich has the votes to do practically what he pleases with the bill, that further talk is a waste of time and they are ready to agree on a day for a vote at any time. They are urging a vote on the income tax proposition but that Mr. Aldrich will not permit. Senator Bailey spoke unusually frankly when he said on the floor of the Senate, "We feel the ground slipping from under our feet and we would like to vote on the income tax amendment right away." The ground is slipping from under their feet and that is why Mr. Aldrich will not permit the measure to come to a vote. He is convinced that one by one the Republican supporters of the income tax proposition will be picked off and that when the vote finally comes it will be supported by the Democrats and only three or four Republicans. Senator Culberson has dissected the tariff bill so that all who run may read, has shown that it is not an honest revision of the tariff and has made it evident that the Republicans are in full control and, therefore, must be held wholly responsible for the measure by the people. There is really nothing more for the Democrats to do and they might as well vote now as later.

THE PRESIDENT'S BELIEF

The President has said that he believes a satisfactory bill will come out of the conference between the House and the Senate, whatever may be the character of the bill as passed by the upper house. This also may be true, but it probably depends largely on what is termed a satisfactory bill. Only a comparatively short time ago Mr. Taft was an advocate of free lumber. He said so himself. Now he admits that he will sign a bill which imposes a duty of a dollar a thousand feet on lumber. Will that be his course with regard to his other convictions? If he yields half of each of them and then pronounces the tariff bill satisfactory it will not be a revision downward worthy of the name, and that it will not be the expectation of most of the Democrats.

VISIT UNSATISFACTORY

Disquieting news from Cuba has reached Washington and it is now learned that the chief purpose of the Secretary of War in his recent visit to Havana was to ascertain how much foundation there was for the disquieting rumors and to whisper a word of advice to the Cuban officials.

Unfortunately, Secretary Dickinson was taken ill just as his ship, the Mayflower, reached Havana and he was unable to land. It was, in fact, necessary to hurry back to this country, without even waiting for the Postmaster General who had left here with the purpose of joining Mr. Dickinson in Havana. This is the occasion of considerable disappointment to the administration although it is possible Postmaster General Hitchcock may be commissioned to conduct something of an investigation and to impart to the Cuban authorities the words of warning Secretary Dickinson was expected to convey.

LETTER FROM J. C. EVANS

A Former Resident of the County

The Gazette Welcomed.

Bell's Gap, Blair County. Editor Gazette:—For a short time I have been receiving the Bedford Gazette regularly. It was the standby in my father's day, away back in the forties, and dates back to George Bowman's time and during the editorial career of B. F. Meyers, up to about twenty years ago; since then I have only been an occasional reader of its columns, until the last few weeks. It used to be a common saying, "If you saw it in The Gazette it's all right and must be true," and I understand this still holds good.

I was wonderfully pleased with the list of our fallen heroes given in the last number. I went over the list and recognized 220 among the number of those who have passed over to the other country, all of whom I was personally acquainted with—my neighbors, associates, brothers in the lodge room, and in the church of my choice; many of them were under my charge in the public schools in my younger days. While it is sad to think they are taken from us here on earth as our neighbors, associates and advisers, it recalls many pleasant moments spent in their society. Where, oh where are the fathers who guided our youth, those who taught us lessons of wisdom and truth? They have gone from earth, but we have hopes of meeting them again.

I was born and raised in the eastern part of Bedford County, near Ray's Hill, and have seen the allotted three-score years and ten of which the Bible speaks, and while many in the list of soldiers were much younger than I, for some reason I have been spared and enjoy good health.

Bellwood, near here, is a thriving town, situated on the main line of the P. R. R., seven miles northeast of Altoona, and is a borough of about 2,000 inhabitants. The Bell's Gap R. R., owned by the P. R. R., intersects with the main line. A large amount of coal is shipped from here. Bellwood has quite a nice railroad yard and considerable repair work is done, and until the depression of business about 500 men were employed. The surroundings are favorable for a large city in the future if prosperity should come again and remain with us. We are surrounded by a fairly good farming community which also seems favorable to fruit growing.

COX ANNIVERSARY

The anniversary of the finding of the Lost Cox Children of the Alleghenies was attended last Thursday by more than 1,500 people from all parts of central Pennsylvania. It was not so much an anniversary as an excursion to the site near Spruce Hollow, Bedford County, where the two small Cox boys, who wandered from their parental home to die in the mountain wilderness, were found 53 years ago.

A prayer was offered by the Rev. Michael Claar, after which an able address was delivered by District Attorney S. H. Sell; several other addresses were made by Bedford County people, following Mr. Sell's discourse. Music was furnished by the Pavia and Beaverdale Cornet Bands.

The Picture and the Lover

By LESTER GREY.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

To begin with, she was not mother, but it had pleased the young artist to give the picture that name because it was his ideal of what his mother would have been if she had lived.

In real life she was a quiet little person, just over the brow of the highway of years, journeying softly, placidly down the smooth path, for the winter of existence lay hidden beyond turns in the road, and she had not glimpsed it yet.

It was not one of the large canvases of the exhibition, nor was it hung in the most desirable lights reserved for the great, yet it was well placed, for Dean Carroll, though young, had in a measure been recognized, and there were people of discernment who looked for his work.

The composition had been cleverly conceived. It showed a veranda corner of what was evidently an old ruin of a country house of half a century ago. The big French window, the half of an old colonial pillar and a general air of shabby gentility made a fitting frame for the sweet-faced woman who sat in the modern wicker porch chair, a magazine on her lap, and who looked straight out of the picture.

To one content to revel in the delight of it all it showed a happy mother speaking to some stalwart son who had brought her good news or perhaps just himself with a hearty greeting of love.

To the critic who sought to know why it pleased him the greatest charm seemed to be in the eyes. Carroll had done wonders there, and they seemed to carry a message of a mother's love that had known no anxieties, no sleepless nights of wondering where some wandering boy was resting and praying that God might watch over him.

They were big, brown, expressive eyes, with the slightest suggestion of wrinkled corners, a hint of age further carried out here and there in the hair by a touch of time's silver strands showing through the soft-hued brown.

It attracted some attention from the writers, and friends told Carroll it was distinctly good. Otherwise it created no stir. It was one of half a hundred others equally creditable to the artists and would probably bring a decent enough sum when placed on sale.

Yet somehow Carroll liked to look at it, probably because it brought back to him memories of that Virginia summer when he feared he was close to death and of the gentle spinster who had nursed him past the crisis and mothered him through a happy convalescence.

His own mother had died when he was very young, and as he lay on his bed of illness watching her sweet face as she moved about the room it gave him joy to pretend that he was really her son, and it grieved him to think that perhaps years to come might be both lonely to her and full of trouble.

One afternoon when he stood half in a reverie of remembrance before the picture he was conscious that an elderly man near him was evincing more than usual interest.

He turned for his glasses, turned the leaves of the catalogue until he came to the number; then the eagerness died out of his face, and he turned away. But he came back and again looked upon it with no concealment of his appreciation.

The stranger noticed Carroll when he started away the second time and stopped to ask him:

"Do you know anything about the picture?"

"Why yes, naturally I painted it."

"You are Mr. Carroll, then. I was going to buy you up. Is it for sale?" the older man inquired.

"Well you know we artists have to live. Few of us paint for fame alone, so it is like the rest. Only I hope it goes to some one who will appreciate it. The circumstances of its painting are dear memories."

"Are you—are you her—son? Tell me!" And the questioner put a trembling hand on the artist's shoulders.

"No," replied Carroll. "I wish I was, or, rather, if my own mother had lived."

"Can you spare me the time to tell me the circumstances you speak of—that is, if you will? Thank you, but not here. Let us go to my house. I live near." And he led the way out.

"It isn't much of a story except in its personal appeal to me," began Carroll a few moments later. "But I presume it reminds you of some one, and if the two women are alike I know you understand how fond I am of her."

"Last spring I was threatened with fever and was told to get out of the city. I found a quiet place owned by the original of the portrait, and she took me in. Unfortunately I did not escape soon enough, and the fever caught me. There was no one with her but an old servant, and I asked to be moved into the nearest town.

"She would not hear of it and nursed me on a journey to death's door and back again to the sunshine to the trees and the birds—and life. It is something that one cannot explain—her tenderness, her motherliness and the sense of comfort, of love even, for a stranger that she gave to me."

"Her entrance would light up my sickroom; her presence was better than all the medicine in the world. Frankly, she is the dearest, sweetest woman I have ever known. I was only two when my mother died. That's about all, I think."

"Mr. Carroll," his host began, "I have never met you, but am perhaps known to you. I am Judge Johnson Lee Carter, and I am from Virginia. When I was a hotheaded young man I was in love with a girl who is probably the double of the lady in your picture. I loved her devotedly, madly, sir, and she loved me. But I was headstrong, sir, and I quarreled with her one night and came north."

"All my life the years have been loveless except my love for her. Three, four, five years passed, and I knew she was probably married, so I have never inquired, but the picture, sir, brought it all back to me, all the years I have missed that might have been crowded with happiness, for they would have been happy ones. Mr. Carroll, sir, she was the finest lady on earth. Now you know why I want to buy your picture and—"

"Judge Carter, there can be no talk of buying and selling that picture after what you have told me. There, there; no one else will get it. The exhibition will last another month. You can get back from Albemarle county before that."

"What are you saying, boy? Albemarle county? Why, that's where I lived. Is it Ruth? Is she a widow? Is she free, and is it—"

"Ruth Cressley, and she is not a widow," said Carroll quietly. "She has never married."

"Honest, boy? Honest? Forgive me, forgive me, Mr. Carroll. Then she didn't forget?"

"She is the sort who loves once—for always, I think," and Carroll extended his hand.

"And the picture?" asked the judge.

"Will be my wedding present."

"God bless you, sir; God bless you," and there were tears in his eyes as he showed Carroll to the door.

Carroll is famous now and a few years older. Ask him the best thing he ever did and he will tell you "Mother." Perhaps you won't understand him, but Judge Carter knows, and Mrs. Johnson Lee Carter shares the knowledge.

The Masterpiece.

Alma Tadema, the artist, did not achieve fame at a single bound. He had a few ups to many downs before he was finally recognized as a painter of ability. In his student days one of his unsuccessful pictures was returned unsold by the committee of the Brussels exhibition of 1859. The subject was a house on fire, says the Associated Sunday Magazine.

Instead of a tirade against the stupidity or favoritism of the committee the artist asked his fellow students into his studio and invited them to jump through the canvas. He led the way by leaping head first through the middle.

A second unsuccessful effort was a large sized square picture that came back again and again to its creator's easel until at last he revenged himself upon it in a novel way by cutting the picture out of its frame and giving it to an old woman to use as a table cover.

There was some one at last to appreciate its excellence. The next time Alma Tadema saw the old woman she told him that it was "much better than those common oilcloth things. They always let the water through," she explained, "but that one of yours is a good thick one, with plenty of paint on it."

Chasing the Polar Bear.

A polar bear chase is not very dangerous if one has coolness of mind and a good gun. Taking everything into account, it is easier properly to wound a bear than to catch a rabbit between the legs, because in spite of his ferocity the bear knows very little about defending himself against man, armed as man is nowadays. Besides, the arctic bear does not recognize man as such and takes him for the most part for a seal. The pilot among the hunters perched in his crow's nest on the mast of the vessel and provided with a huge telescope, can distinguish in clear weather a bear five kilometers off or farther, so the hunter has time to watch his prey and to prepare his plan of attack. One can have splendid hunts on the icebergs as well. Sometimes the bear takes to the water to escape. In this case he is lost, for he cannot swim as quickly as a boat can follow, and the hunter can kill him almost without running any risks.

"Well you know we artists have to live. Few of us paint for fame alone, so it is like the rest. Only I hope it goes to some one who will appreciate it. The circumstances of its painting are dear memories."

"Are you—are you her—son? Tell me!" And the questioner put a trembling hand on the artist's shoulders.

"No," replied Carroll. "I wish I was, or, rather, if my own mother had lived."

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy.

The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

ASPHALT IN ROCK ROADS.

An Improvement Suggested For the Use of Motor Cars.

States that are considering good roads are likely to be interested in the suggestions recently made in Washington by Amzi L. Barber, who has spent his life in the asphalt business. If it is at all feasible it would apply chiefly in thickly settled districts, and especially in the vicinity of cities, where motor cars, as in Jackson county, Mo., are beginning to wear out the highways.

Macadam has not stood up under the tremendous grinding of the heavy, high speed cars, and the Massachusetts highway commission and the federal government are conducting experiments to find a substitute.

Mr. Barber's suggestion, made at the annual meeting of the Independent Asphalt association in Washington, is that the problem could be solved by laying a strip of asphalt in the middle of a macadam road. Taking the average cost of making a sixteen foot macadam roadway at $10,000 a mile, Mr. Barber estimated the total cost of a sixteen foot road with a six foot strip of asphalt in the middle at about $13,000 a mile, an increase of 30 per cent.

"Horses can be driven on the macadam, as now, if desired," Mr. Barber said. "Motor cars when the road is clear will have an ideal surface in the middle, equal to a billiard table, with no ruts or lumps to look out for. When the cars meet they may slow down and turn out so as to run upon the macadam only on one side and for a few feet, and when rain first falls on the asphalt, making it slippery, they can run with one side on the pavement and one side on the macadam to avoid skidding. When on the strip of pavement in the middle they will cause neither dust nor wear."

"Finally, and if no other advantage were to be gained, farmers can haul on the asphalt more than double the load that they can haul on macadam. This consideration alone should decide the matter in favor of the asphalt strip."

Mr. Barber expressed the opinion that the federal government ought to appropriate $20,000,000 a year for roads, to be apportioned to states providing three times the amount received.

What is Old Age?

This is Walt Mason's story: A few days ago an aged man was planted in the grave when the clods had been heaped upon it. Friends stood by the open grave and shed real tears, yet none of them would have called him back to life had that been possible, for he had died old age and consequent infirmity.

The toil and tribulations of seven years had battered him down, for a long time before his death merely went through the motions of living.

"He was an old, old man," said mourners as they turned away from the grave when the clods had been heaped upon the coffin lid.

"His age wasn't hurting him at all," responded a querulous voice. It was from a white-haired man who stood by the newly made grave leaning upon a stick. The speaker was the dead man's father. He was ninety-eight years old.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

THE HORSE'S FOOT.

Animal's Weakest Part Too Often Neglected, Says a Veterinarian.

By G. H. GLOVER, D. V. M.

In considering the diseases to which horsesfall, there are two things that should always be considered as of special importance—the teeth and the feet. The average period of usefulness of the horse is curtailed several years by the inadequacy of the teeth. In most horses at the age of fifteen the teeth have become rough and uneven, and from that time on the horse is a hard keeper, and the real cause is not known by the owner. In buying horses the teeth and the feet should receive most careful examination.

Ordinarily, in speaking of the feet of the horse, we mean the part enclosed by the hoof wall. Looking at it from a standpoint of comparative anatomy, the foot includes all below the knee and the hock. The artificial conditions under which the horse is placed and the unusual demand exacted of him result in almost every case in diseased conditions which render him incapable of doing the work he would otherwise do. Shoeing, which places him under artificial conditions, combined with the hard roads, over-work and improper feeding, soon produces inflammatory conditions which may result in side bones, ringbones, coffin joint lameness, cracks in the hoof wall, contracted heels, corns and a great many more diseases too numerous to mention.

In many cases the horse must be shod, but there certainly is far too much shoeing done. It is surprising how much work the horse can do under most conditions without shoes.

FOOT

DOUBLE CORNS ON HORSE'S HOOF.

he be brought gradually to the work and a little care and judgment be exercised in this matter during the first three or four years of the colt's life. There are three things especially to be remembered if you wish to give this subject a little extra thought—first, as long as you use horses that have weak or defective feet for breeding purposes just so long will you have horses with a predisposition to these things, and you will lose money on them accordingly; second, do less shoeing. A horse with fairly good feet will not need to be shod unless he be worked on the pavement, race track or in mountainous districts; third, do not allow any horseshoe to use the buttress on the soles of the feet nor the rasp on the outside. Do not leave the shoes on longer than four weeks without resetting.

In substance, remember that the foot is the weakest part of the horse; that the service of the horse is worth money to you. Take good care of the horse's feet!

Save the Good Breeders.

Breed the sows just as long as breeding them is profitable. It is generally not good economy to slaughter a good breeding sow.

THE DAIRYMAN.

Milk quietly, cleanly, quickly and thoroughly. Cows do not like unnecessary noise or delay. Milk at nearly the same hour each night and morning and milk the cows in the same order.

Value of Testing.

The other day we were in a dairy that netted its owner last year on a strictly creamery basis over $50 per cow. That man was too sharp to keep that been possible, for he had died old age and consequent infirmity.

The toil and tribulations of seven years had battered him down, for a long time before his death merely went through the motions of living.

"He was an old, old man," said mourners as they turned away from the grave when the clods had been heaped upon the coffin lid.

"His age wasn't hurting him at all," responded a querulous voice. It was from a white-haired man who stood by the newly made grave leaning upon a stick. The speaker was the dead man's father. He was ninety-eight years old.

SPRAYING DEMONSTRATION

To be Given at the County Home on Tuesday, June 1.

Second spraying demonstration for the codling moth and fungus diseases of apple trees after the blossoms have fallen, with Bordeaux Mixture and Arsenate of Lead, will be given at the Bedford County Home, June 1 at 1 o'clock. We invite the farmers and fruit growers to meet with us and see how the work is done to get the best results and preserve the future usefulness of the orchards.

It is absolutely necessary, to get the best results in spraying, to use the proper materials at the right time, properly made and most thoroughly applied. Spraying, in most cases, is a preventive and not a cure, but depends upon your using the right remedy at the right time. For the above reasons we urge all who are interested in the production of better and bigger crops, to meet with us and see how to do the work properly and how to make and apply the remedies. We will guarantee to all that, if you will follow out the instructions we shall give you, you will increase your crops from 30 to 50 per cent, and preserve the life and health of your trees. R. F. Lee.

Miss Dibert is one of the fairest of Bedford County's daughters and wore a magnificent gown of blue Messaline silk. Mr. King was formerly City Editor of the Chicago Daily News and is now treasurer of The National Honduras railway, which is building in Central America. The young couple left on the morning train for Chicago, from whence they will continue their journey to Seattle, and visit the Alaska-Yukon Exposition. Many valuable presents were received, among which was a $500 check from the bride's father, Dr. C. C. Dibert.

"Pressure-Salesmanship"
IS NOT PRACTICED HERE!

Many a time you've started out to buy some clothes with a pretty definite idea of what you wanted. You've gone to "your store," you've told "your salesman" about it; and you've bought something else. Why? Not because you changed your mind. Not because your first idea of what you wanted was wrong. But—because the store didn't have what you wanted. And you didn't like to seem cranky, or obstinate. So you earned the approval of your salesmen-friend by buying something the store HAD, in place of something YOU wanted.

At this store we try to realize your own ideas about clothes. We try to own it in stock—if its something modish and distinctive. We don't want you to sacrifice your own judgment, or taste, or pre-conceived idea. No store earns your friendship by making "the sale" of more importance than anything else—by selling you something against your better judgment. There's a certain sort of pressure-salesmanship that will accomplish that, you know. But it's not practiced here.
